Thomas Beaty was born in Ireland in 1824

His physicians told him that he was over taxing his strength, but he stuck to his post manfully until yesterday morning, when he was compelled to call for a carriage to take him home. He is now at his home, 1041 Madison avenue, and declined to receive any callers. His condition is not alarming at the present time, but those who are acquainted with his state of health say that it is very improbable that he will ever again resume his official duties. He is too feeble to risk the strain, and it is the opinion of his medical advisers that for the remainder of his life he
